Hugues is a member of the Canadian Armed Forces and began fencing when he was 19 at the Estoc Club in Quebec. His goals are nothing less than becoming a world and Olympic champion. The 2008 Canadian Armed Forces athlete of the year hopes to become an information specialist and a member of the Armed Forces' Joint Task Force. His motivation for fencing comes from his love of the sport and his desire to be the best. One of his fondest fencing memories is from the 2009 World Cup in Berne where he placed second after defeating the Olympic champion in the quarter finals. By special arrangement with his military superiors in the First Battalion of the Royal 22nd Regiment, Hugues is able to train 15 times a week, attend national training camps and follow the national team's tough competition schedule. His role models include fencer Charles St-Hilaire from the Estoc Club and famous fictional characters like Athos, Porthos, and Aramis. His girlfriend is the most influential person in his life and no matter where his travels take him, Hugues is always happy to return to his favourite city in the world, Quebec.
